FROM THE EDITORIAL DESK

It is a great privilege to present to you on behalf of the Editorial Board Volume 5 No 1 of the UNESWA Journal of Education (UJOE). We thank God for life and good health despite the challenging times the world is presently going through. UJOE holds great promise for excellence in scholarship and research. It seeks to judiciously balance the international, national and local educational needs. While the journal esteems the value of academic excellence, it further accentuates the practical application of the cream of that excellence for meaningful down – to – earth service to humanity. This edition has articles on current issues such as COVID – 19 and its impact on learners’ performance, teachers and lecturers mental health, readiness to implement e – learning and so many other topics that we hope you will find pleasant and educative to read. We can never appreciate enough the contributions of the Board of Editors, Advisory Board and Reviewers without whose services it would have been impossible to produce this 9th edition of UJOE. Readers’ constructive comments and views are welcome.

Please remain safe and protected. God Bless.
